“We’ve attempted to weave into one narrative a story of our national identity and our racial identity: a story of the birth of our nation, as witnessed and recorded by people free and unfree, rich and poor, master and slave, proslavery and antislavery. This history is a story about the meaning of freedom. It is a uniquely American story, a story whose legacy we encounter daily when we pass one another on the streets, in the halls, and on the playing fields and we see race.”

-ORLANDO BAGWELL, Executive Producer, Africans in America
