Summer Schema Building Challenge

Schema: an underlying organizational pattern or structure; a conceptual framework. Schema provides the basis by which someone relates to the events he or she experiences. (dictionary.com)

Some AP Language teachers have categorized schema into the following categories: current events, history, experience, literature, pop culture, sports, and science (CHELPSS)

This assignment is a fact-gathering, critical thinking challenge to broaden your knowledge of the world around you. It is designed to help you build your personal schema by gathering high-quality information which you will then have as you develop and support your own arguments and think critically about the arguments of others. Ultimately, all argument is based on evidence, which might include facts, statistics, expert testimony, examples, anecdotes, or other appeals to our beliefs and needs. Effective argument relies on a variety of evidence. The better informed you are, the more evidence you have at your disposal when you need it (like, for example, when taking the AP Lang exam or trying to convince your parents that you should be able to do that thing you really want to do.)

The Challenge: to complete as many of these schema builders as you can over the summer.

The Task: for each schema builder, all you have to do is:

- a. Identify your source
- b. Identify the schema category (current events, history, experience, literature, pop culture, sports, and science)
 - Look at the list. There are lots of choices. You will find that some schema builders fit into more than one category. For example, an Academy Award winning documentary about the 60s could fit in pop culture or history. Label it with the category makes sense to you.
- c. Write a paragraph or so, thoughtfully answering one of the following questions.
 - What do I know/understand now that I didn't before?
 - How did this experience change the way I think about something?
 - What is a thought, idea, or perspective that I might not have considered if I hadn't encountered this material?

This can be handwritten, digital, or a combination as long as you can turn in a hard copy that is organized and readable in the fall.

Each schema builder reflection you complete will earn you one raffle ticket. Our "Welcome to AP Language!" raffle will include gift cards and other AMAZING prizes!
